Every quote in the selected source set, followed through to a confirmed order or an outcome that still needs an owner. Figures come from the weekly quote books joined to the order logs on quote number.

Volume and conversion stay on separate lanes so workload is never mistaken for performance. Recent weeks sit below the 10% reference because their decision window is still open — that is what the exposure lens is for.

NOT ALL QUOTED WORK BEHAVES THE SAME.

READ THE SPLIT

REVISED QUOTES CONVERT AT

40.0%

10 revised vs 11.6% on 164 single-pass

Where to look first: conversion is a rate, but the follow-up list should be ordered by value. The bands above show which size of work is actually returning, and which is quoted heavily but rarely booked.

WORK DELIVERED WHEN IT WAS NEEDED.

RELEASE DISCIPLINE

SPEED, MEASURED ONLY WHERE IT WAS SCORED.

On-time release compares each requested due date with its sent quote date. It is independent of conversion — a late quote can still win, and an early one can still go unanswered.

48 of 174 scored · 28% coverage

Rows without an EARLY or LATE result are excluded from both the numerator and the denominator, so this rate never stands in for the full quote book.

Ordered by quoted value, not by age. Each row needs one of three answers at the review: still live, lost with a reason, or an owner-held next step and a date.

THREE THINGS THIS DATA SAYS

01 The largest band — 4 quotes carrying $29.7M — has returned no linked order in this cohort. That single row is worth more than every confirmed win combined.

02 150k and above converts at 0.0% across 5 quotes — the weakest scored size band.

03 Release timing is scored on 48 of 174 scored · 28% coverage. Widening that coverage would make delivery discipline a usable operating measure rather than a partial one.
